

CANE Discretionary Grants

CANE Discretionary Grants are available for:

1. Classroom projects for teaching of the Classics at all levels;
2. Research or Creative Writing projects in the Classics which can be used to enhance the teaching of the classics;
3. Materials such as slides, videos, or computer software to further the teaching of the Classics.

Applications are invited from teachers of Latin, Greek, and Classics at all levels who are members of CANE in good standing. Preference will be given to teachers at the middle and high school levels. Four deadlines for Discretionary Grants fall on 1 October, 1 December, 1 February, and 1 May, but applications may be submitted at any time. To apply, please forward by e-mail a full description of your project, including costs and the specific project components for which funds are requested to the immediate past president of CANE. Requests may not exceed $400. Grant recipients must agree to submit a paragraph detailing the results of their projects and will be encouraged, when appropriate, to submit a description of their experience for the 'Ratio et Res' section of NECJ.

E-mail the Immediate Past President (immpastpres@caneweb.org)