

THE CLASSICAL ASSOCIATION OF NEW ENGLAND

Alison Barker Travel Scholarship

travel scholarship for undergraduate students

The Alison Barker Travel Scholarship awards up to $750 annually for educational travel to classical sites to a college or university undergraduate who shows particular interest in the classics. Such travel must be of an educational, rather than a personal or familial, nature; the travel must have as its destination sites that bear substantial physical evidence of the presence of the ancient Greeks and/or Romans; and the travel must be organized by a classics department or be a recognized and established institutional program of study for classical studies (e.g. the Intercollegiate Center [Centro], the American School of Athens, etc.).

Travel must be completed by December 31st of the calendar year following the reception of the award. It is expected that the winner of the award will provide proof of payment made to the relevant travel program before any money will be released. Upon the trip's completion, the recipient will be asked to submit a brief (1 page) essay describing the experience and its benefits. It is expected that the applicant's professor will be a member of CANE before the award is made.
